Henry Champ

Veteran CBC Washington Newsman

Speaker Biography

Henry Champ is CBC Newsworld's correspondent in Washington, D.C., delivering Canadian viewers the latest developments in the U.S. political arena. Recently, he has been a leading Canadian voice on coverage of the war on terrorism, the war in Iraq and the growing concerns over the Canada-U.S. relationship. Champ spent 10 years as a correspondent with NBC News before moving to Halifax in 1993 to become part of the anchor team of CBC Morning News.

During his years with NBC, he was assigned to the network's Frankfurt and London Bureaus, from which he covered the tumultuous political events in Europe. He was also assigned to NBC's Washington Bureau, where he served as the U.S. Congressional correspondent for the network's news programs.

Before making the move south of the border, the Brandon, Manitoba, native spent 15 years sharpening his journalism skills at CTV. As an investigative reporter for W5 from 1978 to 1982, Champ broke major stories, including that of a Canadian citizen wrongfully imprisoned in Texas who was released as a result of his report; a story on police brutality in Toronto that led to the establishment of a task force commission on the subject; and an exposé on the corruption and mishandling of Canadian foreign aid to Haiti, which led to the resignation of high-ranking officials.

Prior to joining W5, Champ held positions as CTV's Washington Bureau Chief, London Bureau Chief, Montreal Bureau Chief and network correspondent. During this time, he was among the last correspondents to leave Vietnam during the fall of Saigon and among the first Canadian journalists to be admitted into the People's Republic of China.

In 2005, Champ was honoured by his alma mater, Brandon University, with an honorary degree.

Previous Law Alumni Association Distinguished Speakers include Chief Justice Beverley McLachlin, UBC's President, Stephen J. Toope and Brian Burke, General Manager of the Stanley Cup-winning Anaheim Ducks.
